this book has two purposes the first is clearly historical the second is more philosophical and interpretive its success in the former will be less arguable than its attainment of the latter the contribution to the history of spanish letters consists in critically establishing the fact that the sources of fray luis de le n s moral and spiritual thought are hebraic and that he can be seen to stand as one in a long line of christian hebraists both scholastic and humanist his philosophical views are cast in an hebraic tradition not in an hellenic one as supposed by nearly every other commentator i have stressed the presence of a living hebrew culture in spain after 1492 and i have suggested that this and the jewish parentage of fray luis are very significant i have also identified an intellectual debt fray luis owed to non jewish orientalists such as egidio da viterbo and girolamo seripando but even they learned from exiled spaniards i want to present fray luis as a most characteristic thinker in the world of baroque spain i think most will agree with the picture i have outlined the more audacious aspect is my wish to show the importance of the jewish heritage as found in the literary and philosophical production of this remarkable genius it is of course my contention that today know ledge about fray luis and what he stood for is extraordinarily important this book examines the scope of urban planning in mexico through case studies of four municipalities campeche hermosillo leon and morelia that have recently updated their plans using new federal guidelines we seek to advance a research agenda on the impacts of planning and its effectiveness by proposing some foundations for how to assess planning processes as well as to provide guidance for the federal government of mexico in its oversight of municipal planning practice and recommendations for the four cities we study we begin with the concern that the debate over whether urban planning in mexico works suffers from a lack of shared definitions about what is and is not within the scope of urban planning and a shared conceptual framework for assessing the planning process the case studies were conducted as part of a graduate studio in the department of urban planning at ucla they rely on multiple interviews with planners and professionals in each city as well as documentary and data analysis and literature reviews we use a framework of five processes creating a plan implementing the plan raising revenue to fund urban infrastructure upgrading existing neighborhoods to ensure equal access across neighborhoods and investing in new infrastructure to support growth each case presents a brief urban history and contextual data a description of local government planning activities the current plan the city s political history and transparency in local planning an assessment of planning processes the mechanisms for changing land uses and examples one infrastructure project and enforcement of land use rules and an evaluation of the plan itself including some gis analysis local zoning and federal policy the book s recommendations fall into three areas making plans into part of an ongoing and iterative process increasing coordination between municipal budgeting and planning and creating transparency and public input to the planning process more specifically we find that new plans often ignore successes and failures of prior plans they do not periodically assess indicators to gauge impact and discretionary changes in between plan updates diminishes the importance of the plan itself in the second area we argue that the scope of planning must be expanded the plan should be integrated with the municipal budgeting process and municipalities in mexico should work to generate more local revenues to adequately fund plans finally in the third area we recommend making planning documents zoning maps and basic data on urban conditions accessible to the public a lack of transparency and the often opaque decision making processes harm the legitimacy of governance we also outline how the federal government can play a role in advancing these recommendations for local planning processes
